

ABSTRACT

An electrostatic actuation device, including a flexible electrode, having a first and a second end, at least part of the flexible electrode being mobile relative to a substrate, two electrodes fixed relative to the substrate, and a mechanism for forming two pivots of the flexible electrode, located between the two ends of the flexible electrode.